

I have enjoyed home recording for many year, so that I can watch it when I get home or just any time. I think it would be very stupid to limit something that most American have be able to do since the VCR. I understand that the companies want to limit recoding so they can make more money. But it is the consumer that decides what is good and what is not and the public loves to record. Finally in closing I would like to say this technology is meant to push us into the future how can we do that if we are stepping backwards at the same time.
